

“Ironically,
brothers and sisters,
the natural man who is so very selfish in so many ordinary ways is strangely unselfish in that he reaches for too few of the things that bring real joy.
He settles for a mess of pottage
instead of eternal joy.”

Neal A. Maxwell, Fireside, March 27, 1994