

“It is not an easy thing to be a parent. There is so much of frustration, so much of worry, so much of blighted dreams and broken hopes for so very many.

I recognize, of course, that there are many homes where this is not the case, where things go smoothly and well, where there are never raised angry voices, where there are parents who are happy and calm, and children who are faithful and grow up without serious problems.

If such be your home, be grateful. Thank the Lord for the marvelous blessing that has come to you.”
